CLAIM WHOLESALE CHINESE SMUGGLE

Hearing in Cases of Hop Lee's Two Sons Confirm Theories of Government Inspectors. Agencies both East and West.

Further developments in the case of Hop Lee, our Chinese laundryman, show that he brought both his sons into the United States by the aid of money paid to a smuggling syndicate, which employs its agents in many of the large business centers of the country, and operates extensively both in China and this country.

The trouble started for Hop in August when United States Inspector Charles V. Mallet, who has charge of the immigrant station at Philadelphia, discovered that Hop had a son in Gettysburg about whom the Government authorities knew nothing. An investigation, was immediately started by Mr. Mallet personally, which led to arrest of So Ho Dan Hon in Gettysburg about a month ago. At further hearings before United States Commissioner R. F. Topper recently information was imparted by Hop Lee that twelve years ago he got an older son, Dan Lee, into the United States, through the port at Montreal, Canada, and then across the American line where the boy, in company with other Orientals, was arrested. This was expected by the syndicate, and then the cleverness of the smugglers was apparent as they had beforehand arranged with a Chinaman to swear that Dan Lee was his son. The company had their own lawyer to look after the legal steps in the procedure.

Questioned by the Inspector, Hop also told of writing to Lot Yawt Loy Jung Co., of San Francisco, and procuring another Chinese boy, Gee Doy Yu by name, to help his son So Ho Dan Hon in the laundry here in town during his (Hop's) absence. When asked why he wrote to this firm to get help, Hop answered that he knew that he could get it as the syndicate made a business of getting Chinese laborers into the United States and would then send them out to employers wherever they were desired.

The boy, Gee Doy, according to Hop, is now in Sunbury; Dan Lee, the older son, is located on Market street, Harrisburg, and Dan Hon is here with his father under bond awaiting orders of deportation.

According to Inspector Mallet serious charges could be brought against Hop for the part he has played in getting his sons illegally into the country but he has imparted much valuable information to the Government through its agent, Mr. Mallet, and the case will not be pushed against him.

However, both his sons and the other Chinese boy will be taken in charge and, after their case is more fully investigated, they will be sent back to China. Young Dan Hon is ready to go now at any order as he has all his possessions packed and is staying with his father under $1,500 bond until other smuggled Chinese have been rounded up when all will be deported together.

Hop's contemplated trip to China has been postponed indefinitely as he claims that even here in town his life is in danger from Chinese secret orders as the result of the information he has given which will lead to a rigid investigation by the United States Government, both in the East and West.

Hop's parental affection for his boys has cost him dearly as his sons will, sooner or later, be taken away from him and sent home to China, and aside from this loss, the father has already spent over $1,000 in trying to have his boys become permanent American residents.

Unfortunate as Hop has been he has truthfully and unhesitatingly told all he knew about the smuggling companies throughout the United States and he is meeting with leniency for the manly part he has taken in revealing the methods of his unsuccessful venture.

POST OFFICE AND STORE DESTROYED

Reed Store and Virginia Mills Post Office Destroyed in Fire which Burned to the Ground Building of Gettysburg Man.

The store of H. K. Reed and the Virginia Mills post office, both located in a building owned by J. E. Kissinger, of Gettysburg, burned to the ground at an early hour this morning in a fire supposed to have been caused by some customer at the Reed store who was refused further credit. No suspicions are entertained as to the identity of the possible incendiary.

It is customary to have a night watchman constantly on duty at the building which houses the general merchandise establishment of Mr. Reed and the post office, of which Miss Maud Reed is postmistress. For some reason he was not on duty Sunday night and the fire was not discovered until it had gained great headway. William Herring, living close by, was the first to see the blaze and he gave an alarm but the frame building was doomed when the first residents of the mountain village appeared on the scene.

When first seen the fire was in the upper part of the structure. A stove was located in the building but there is said to have been no fire there on Sunday and the theory of incendiarism is the only one tenable.

Mr. Reed had a varied stock of dry goods, groceries and all the other things that go to make up a well equipped country store and everything was burned. At the post office all the books and supplies were destroyed though Miss Reed, as was her custom, had taken home with her on Saturday night the stamps and money order receipts and blanks, and they were saved. It is understood that a small quantity of stamped envelopes burned. No little inconvenience will be caused by the burning of the post office records.

Both Mr. Reed and Mr. Kissinger had insurance and a good proportion of the loss is covered by policies.

GAVE SIGNAL

Topton Excursionist Pulls Whistle Cord and is now in Jail.

At a hearing before Squire Hill this morning George Plank, aged 16 years, of Honeybrook, Chester County, was committed to jail without bail, charged with pulling the signal cord on the fifth section of the Topton excursion, which left Gettysburg at 5:40 on Saturday afternoon.

The train was standing at the station while the passengers were loading for their return trip when young Plank reached up and pulled the signal cord two times—the signal for a train to start. However, the first pull did not blow the whistle in the engineer's cab and no serious results occurred through the train starting from the crowded platform. A railroad detective at once grabbed Plank and turned him over to Chief Shealer's care until the hearing this morning when he was held for Court.

GET READY FOR FARMERS' DAY

Finishing Touches being Put on Plans for Farmers' Day Celebration. Lots of Entertainment for All who Attend.

This is the week of Farmers' Day. For the next five days Gettysburg business people and Adams County farmers and housewives will be making preparations looking toward the big annual event which sprang into sudden popularity in 1912.

The same rules which were followed last year will again be in force next Saturday. All exhibits must be at the places at which the premiums are offered not later than nine o'clock Saturday morning, and will be received on Friday if the exhibitors prefer to bring them in a day early. Every exhibit will be marked with a number and the proprietor of the store or business place is expected to keep a list of all numbers and exhibits at his establishment so that, as soon as the judges have selected the winning number, they may be able to announce the name of the fortunate exhibitor.

From the interest being manifested in the county the exhibits will be even more numerous and of better quality than last year and the day will be a fine one in demonstrating the ability of the county housewives and the success of our farmers and fruit growers.

The entertainment features of the day will be well taken care of. Plenty of music will be provided, there will be free street attractions, at least one parade, a foot ball game for the younger people, grotesque masqueraders, street contests for cash prizes, and other events that will lend plenty of amusement for everybody.

The general committee meets this evening to make the final arrangements for the day which needs only the co-operation of the weather man to make it a complete success.

GOOD SHOWING

College Foot Ball Team Springs Surprise on its Friends.

Local supporters of the college foot ball team were surprised and delighted Saturday evening when word was received that they had held the strong State College team to a 16 to 0 score. State has one of the best teams in Pennsylvania and was looking for a walk-away with the Gettysburg boys. They were held scoreless in the first half and frequently had to give up the ball on downs. The longest run of the game was thirty yards. Two touchdowns and a field goal made up the score.

The result of Saturday's game has put new life into the Gettysburg players and, from now on, it is expected that rapid improvement will be made in their play. The slump which followed the Penn game is now a thing of the past and, before the contests with rivals of their own class, the local squad hopes to get in fine shape to give a good account of themselves.

PLANK DELIGHTS GETTYSBURG FANS

Local People Happy over Eddie Plank's Remarkable Victory of Saturday Afternoon. City Papers Free in Praising Local Boy.

But one topic of conversation was welcome in Gettysburg Saturday evening and that was Eddie Plank. Pitching one of the best games of his long career, he defeated New York in the closing game of the World's Series and gave Gettysburg just what it wanted—a decisive victory over Mathewson. But everyone knows the story of the game and all they want now is to hear what the big city dailies have to say of the base ball idol.

Public Ledger: Marvelous is the word that expresses Plank's exhibition. In his long, examplary and even distinguished career on the diamond he never pitched a better game. He was absolutely invincible. The Giants, in name only, were as plastic as potter's clay. They were making their last stand, had been driven into their last entrenchment and they fought with the desperation of trapped tigers. But all their fierce, furious fighting spirit availed naught. Plank was master. Well has Plank been called the "Old Master." His consummate skill never merited the title more than it did this afternoon, when 40,000 wild, despairing spectators, 99 out of every 100 hostile in mind, did their utmost to unnerve him all through the game. But he was as immovable as the polar star. The carnage of Little Round Top would not have disconcerted him Like the heroes of Gettysburg, he was making his last effort for a cause. And he won.

New York American: Once beaten in this series by the great Christy Mathewson, many doubted that Plank—thirty-nine years old, and thirteen years a big league pitcher—could return after such a short rest, but the box score shows the game he pitched. Again he was opposed by Mathewson, and again the big baseball idol of Manhattan pitched a great game, but before the snapping crossfire of the old side winder, the Giants hung helpless when they needed the punch.

Philadelphia Press: Plank did come back in one of the most sensationally, perfect games of his career. His great and ancient rival, Christy Mathewson, on the other hand, was hit hard in the early part of the game. After the game Eddie refused to discuss the rumors that he would quit baseball with to-day's game. "I haven't a word to say about that now," was his only comment. The fact that he let down the desperate Giants to-day with only two hits, is accepted by Mack and the rest of the team as a guarantee that Eddie will be back with the Athletics next year. "The old boy will be out there winning a couple of games for us in the world's series next October," was the laconic comment of Stuffy McInnis upon the rumor.

North American: As soon as Murphy had caught Doyle's fly and the Giants, beaten in a series for the second time by the long, lean hand of Mack, had streaked for their clubhouse to hide their disappointment, the crowd rushed for Plank. Plank faced the mad mob bewildered. It might not have surprised him on the home lot, but to get this kind of greeting on a hostile field, from a crowd that out of loyalty to the home team had steadily been rooting against him from the time the first ball was pitched, seemed too much.

A bunch of strong arms grabbed him. Up in the air went Eddie and he was carried from the field, across its whole length and all aong the whole way, from bench to taxicab, he got nothing but cheers, not one unkindly word coming from that crowd that had seen its team humiliated three times running on the home ground to make complete the triumph of the Mackmen. In his taxicab the hero of the day was overwhelmed. "I don't deserve all this," he said, as he sat with bowed head, while his comrades on the team fell over him in the madness of their rejoicing.

Philadelphia Record: Two hits were the entire product of the Giant attack on Plank, and he gave one base on balls, which started all the trouble in the fifth. For the rest of the time he was superb, and although the Giants swung viciously and violently, and hurled their bats angrily against the ground and yelled at the veteran from the bench and coaching line, he stood firm till the last, immovable, a regular Rock of Gettysburg.

Baltimore American: For one last, forlorn and hopeless stand to-day McGraw sent in Mathewson to grapple again with Plank. But even Matty, the Miracle Man, had no magic and no wizardy which might cope with the power of the foe on one side and the weakness of his pals upon the other. And while the mighty Mathewson was struggling between two such fires in vain, Plank, one of the grandest of pitching veterans, worked his last and greatest game.

The big banquet which is to be given in honor of Eddie has been postponed, upon his own request, to Monday evening, November 3, and indications now are that every available seat will be sold.

RETAIN PHILLIPS

Adams County Teachers Follow Dr. Phillips Case.

Practically all of the contentions of Attorney General Bell, who sought permanently to enjoin the trustees of the West Chester State Normal school from ousting Dr. George M. Phillips, as principal, after the State contracted to take over the institution, are sustained by President Judge Kunkel in an opinion given out Saturday.

The court simply continued the preliminary injunction which was issued prior to the day upon which the State was to assume control of the educational institution.

The State assumed charge of the school on September 22, and under this action Dr. Phillips will remain in charge as heretofore until final disposal of the property is made. Incidentally Dr. Phillips is a member of the State Board of Education. Since his retention places him in a second state job, it is believed that the professor will give up the berth on the State board.

Adam and Eve.

This is a jolly game when twelve or more play. A circle is formed all standing, and one is placed in the center called Eve. Eve is blindfolded and then the circle goes around a few times very quietly until Eve tells them to stop. Eve then points in some direction and the person who is pointed to must go into the circle with Eve and is called Adam. Eve then calls Adam and Adam must answer and say Eve. By this Eve is supposed to locate him, but when Eve comes toward the place where Adam answered he must run to the other side of the circle or any place within it and always try to stay out of Eve's reach, and as she is blindfolded she cannot tell where Adam is only by his voice. It is the most fun when Eve calls very fast, as Adam will have to answer fast and then she can locate him better. When Eve has caught Adam she must guess who it is. If she guesses right Eve joins the circle and Adam must be Eve. But if Eve's guess is wrong she must stand again and Adam joins the circle and the game proceeds.—From a Good Timer, Bertha Seichter.

Alexander the Great.

Alexander the Great before giving the signal for the banquet to be served looked searchingly around upon the faces of all present and called out, "Are all here who fought at Issos?" After a pause Clitus answered, "All, Alexander, but those who fell there." Which was thought to be an ill response for such an occasion, but to which Alexander quickly replied, "Then all who fought at Issos are here, since the glorious dead are always in our memory."

HULK OF VOLTURNO STILL FLOATING

Loss of 136 Lives on Fire-Swept Steamer Confirmed.

SCORES BURNED TO DEATH

Captain of Rescue Ship Tells of Race Through the Night and Terrible Sight on the Doomed Vessel.

London, Oct. 13.—The Cunard company received the following message by wireless from the Carmania:

"The Volturno is floating, ablaze at the fore end, her masts and funnel standing. The northwest gale is moderating.

"Records are not complete. Only eleven survivors here. It is supposed 136 were lost, who attempted to get away in the steamship's boats previous to the arrival of aid. Others were saved."

Message From Captain.

New York, Oct. 13.—Captain Lynch the youthful commander of the liner Volturno, which was destroyed by fire at sea, with the loss of 136 persons, on Thursday, sent a wireless message to the office of the Uranium steamship line from the Kroonland. The message read:

"Volturno abandoned at sea; latitude 48.29; longitude 24.39. Approximate number of passengers saved, 485; crew, 25."

These figures are approximate, since it is known that 521 were saved. The ill-fated boat had on board 657 persons, sixteen first class passengers, 548 steerage passengers and 93 members of the crew. Of this total the 521 rescued are accounted for by the ten steamships that answered the call of the burning ship.

Scores Burned to Death.

Liverpool, Eng., Oct. 13.—A terrific gale in mid-Atlantic prevented every person on board the ill-fated steamer Volturno being saved by the ten vessels that rushed to its assistance following S. O. S. signals Thursday. Steamship officials are unanimous in saying that had it not been for the gale that accompanied the burning of the Volturno all its passengers and crew would have been transferred to the Carmania, of the Cunard line, the first ship that responded.

Though the death list is officially given at 136, it is by no means certain that this is the correct figure. There is a strong possibility that it will be more.

The fire on the Volturno is said to have originated in the engine room at 9.30 o'clock on Thursday marning, and is supposed to have started from the friction of a rod of one of the twin propellers fouled at the height of the storm, driving the engineers and firemen from their quarters and leaving the big vessel at the mercy of the mountain-high waves.

The horror of the disaster grows as more details are known. It is now established that scores were burned to death, caught like in a trap as different portions of the vessel burned. Many passengers leaped overboard and were drowned. Only a few were picked up by the liners that went to the assistance of the Volturno. The rule of the sea, "Women and children first," was strictly followed and disciplane prevailed among the Volturno's crew.

Captain Barr's Story.

A thrilling story of the final hours of the Uranium liner Volturno, that was burned in the mid-Atlantic, was gleaned from a wireless message received from Captain Barr, of the Cunard liner Carmania, which was the first ship to respond to the wireless calls of the Volturno. The story follows:

"On Thursday, while making our way through a gale, the Carmania picked up the following faint' S. O. S.' call:

"'Come quick; ship afire; fear we are doomed.'

"That was the plea which came out of the storm. We immediately secured the location of the burning ship, that was directly in the steamer lane. Extra stokers were ordered into the engine room, and then began a wild race of seventy-eight miles which separated us from the ill-fated ship.

"Standing upon the bridge, I awaited eagerly the first sign of the burning ship. About two hours after we had picked up the call for help we could see from the bridge the blurred ship, wrapped in flame, smoke and fog, rolling in the heavy seas. In the meantime during the hours that we had been rushing to the rescue the wireless operator had kept up an incessant call, notifying all liners within range of the plight and position of the Volturno.

"The Volturno was a seething mass of flames from her bow to the waist. She was pitching and rolling drunkenly.

"Huddled in the stern of the vessel in suspended lifeboats which they had been unable to launch were a number of passengers. All they could do was to watch dumbly the rush of the flames. They were helpless before a terrible death, which seemed inevitable. The wind dashed the heat and smoke about them and they were alternately smothered by spray and suffocated by smoke. Most of the passengers in the boats were women.

"We could see men lashed to the after rail facing death with a kind of frantic despair. There were a number of children in the boats. Alternately the victims wept, prayed or shouted in their helpless and apparent doom. It was a situation to blot out human reason.

"Shortly after 9 o'clock a mass of flames burst out amidships. By midnight most of the inflammable material had been consumed, and the flames apparently were subsiding. In a sense the storm was a sort of blessing, for it kept drenching the ship with spray, thus making the exposed woodwork a difficult fuel.

"At daybreak the flames had died out to a great extent. Immediately after dawn the work of rescue begun.

"The wind had fallen somewhat and the seas were not so high, which was a factor in our favor. Over the sides of the liners ranged about the burned ship went lifeboat after lifeboat, all manned by sturdy fellows, who were prepared to risk their lives for the helpless ones on the Volturno.

"When the fire was discovered the crew had tried to fight it, but they were hampered by the storm and the fact that the flames had made much headway before being discovered. Passengers were notified of the danger, but Captain Lynch feared to send them overboard in the small boats because of the high seas. He instructed his wireless operator to send out the international call for assistance and keep on sending it without intermission, hoping that, as the Volturno was in the steamer lane, help would be near.

"The fire gained rapidly, and when it got to the boiler rooms the boilers exploded with a concussion which almost tore the ship in two. This intensified the fears of the passengers, all of whom believed that their hours were numbered. The more courageous gave words of cheer to the timid, telling them that help would soon be at hand. Officers of the ship reassured the women passengers continually.

"The recognized rule of the sea in ship disasters, 'women and children first,' was enforced by the officers when the work of filling the life boats began."

TWO BURNED IN WRECK OF AUTO

Wife Seriously Injured Trying to Rescue Husband.

Phillipsburg, N. J., Oct. 13.—Mr. and Mrs. I. A. Driggs, of White Haven, Pa., were seriously burned in an auto accident at Port Warren, and both are in the Easton, Pa., hospital, where it is said the former has slight chances of recovery.

Mr. and Mrs. Driggs were returning from a trip to Philadelphia and South Jersey. As they were passing another auto at Fort Warren, Driggs lost control of his machine and it swerved from the road and went down a steep incline through a barbed wire fence and crashed against a tree.

The engine of the car was smashed to bits and the machine immediately took fire. Mrs. Driggs jumped from the car, but her husband was pinned to his seat by the steering wheel.

Passing tourists ran to the aid of the couple, but before they arrived at the burning machine Mrs. Driggs had run back into the flames in an effort to save her husband. She was finally dragged out, her clothes ablaze, and was hurried to a nearby farm house, where she received treatment until the arrival of a physician.

To get Driggs out of the car it was necessary for one of the spectators to lasso him and pull him from the seat. His clothes were burned from his body.

DOCTOR ROBBED PATIENT'S HOUSE

Accidental Shooting Bares a Dual Existence.

WAS DESPERADO AT NIGHT

Former University Professor Found Dead With Revolver, Blackjack and Black Mask.

Reading, Mass., Oct. 13.—Dr. Seven H. Wiberg, formerly an instructor in a Swedish university and author of "The True Origin of Osteopathy," was discovered, following his tragic death here, to be a second Dr. Jekyl and Mr. Hyde.

Conducting a lucrative practice during the day as an oeteopath, and respected throughout the community, at night he transformed himself into a desperado.

Wearing a black silk mask, armed with a deadly blackjack made of lead, a jimmy and an automatic revolver, his body was found on the estate of Mrs. Mary Weeks, a wealthy sixty-eight-year-old widow. He had apparently tripped in making his escape from the house, with the revolver in his hand, the weapon discharging a bullet which penetrated his heart.

Mrs. Weeks, who was rendered unconscious by a glancing blow on the head from the blackjack, was rushed to the Reading hospital, and is now pronounced out of danger.

The discovery that the masked burglar was Wiberg was not made for some time following the discovery of his body.

According to friends of Wiberg, his actions may have been impelled because of the tributes paid to the strength of his hands, many having commented on the fact that he could strangle a person with them with the greatest ease after having felt their terrific strength during massage treatments of osteopathy.

There have been several mysterious assaults, robberies and sudden deaths within a radius of twenty miles of Reading during the past few months, and an investigation started by State Inspector Smith is based on the presumption that Dr. Wiberg has been making nightly trips into the various cities.

Wiberg had been treating Mrs. Weeks for some time and knew that she had thousands of dollars' worth of jewelry, as well as a large amount of ready money in her bedroom. He selected his time with care, learning that her adopted son, W. W. Weeks, would be away and that the servants would be in a far corner of the house.

He apparently thought that the aged woman could be handled in a manner that would prevent her sounding any alarm, and the theory is that he had started to strangle her and when she managed to break from his grip he swung the blackjack, his aim being so poor that it only struck a glancing blow.

Before the weapon struck, however, her screams had aroused the neighbors, and he fled through the back door, the shot coming as he was running across the estate in the drizzling rain.

Little Miss Hudak confessed the robbery and implicated the McGorty girl, after Detective Walsh had suspected her for the spending of large amounts of money.

When the postoffice was robbed $65 in money, $90 in stamps, two watches and trinkets valued at $25 were taken. Numerous other robberies are attributed to the children.

Former Bank Errand Boy Becomes United States Sub-Treasurer.

Chicago, Oct. 13. — A man, who, eighteen years ago, then a country lad, walked into the First National bank, at Sullivan, Ill., and applied for the position of errand boy, became the custodian of nearly $100,000,000 when Irving Shuman took the oath of office as assistant treasurer of the United States.

Shuman qualified for the position some time ago in Washington, giving bonds of $400,000. Immediately after the ceremony the vaults containing approximately $97,000,000 in ready cash, were sealed and eight men from the trasury department at Washington began the work of counting this vast sum.

She Learned to Keep a Bank Account

By OSCAR COX

"My dear," said Robert Read, "what is this nonsense about your joining the suffragists?"

"Why, it's no nonsense at all, Bob. I've joined."

"Will you kindly tell me your object?"

"Well, you see, there are lots of women who own property, and they are interested in making the laws that govern that property. They should have a voice in electing the right officials."

"But you have no property?"

"Haven't I a husband who has? And mayn't he die and leave it to me?"

Mr. Read found this argument too much for him. He thought awhile.

"What you have said," he remarked later, reminds me that, I being liable to die before you do, you will need some knowledge of taking care of property. I think I had better give you some instructions in that direction, else a vote will do you no good, for you won't know enough to use it."

"No fear of that. However, I am ready to be instructed."

"I shall begin with teaching you to keep a bank account. Ever since I went away and left orders with the bank to honor your checks and you forged my name I have felt that you should know more about such matters."

"That was very stupid, wasn't it?"

"I should say so."

A few days later the husband gave his wife a check book, a pass book and a check for a hundred dollars, explaining what each book was for, and told her that she was to deposit the check in the bank. He also told her how to enter each deposit in her check book and subtract each check from her total deposits so that her balance would be always before her. He wrote "For deposit" on the check and told her to sign her name under it, explaining that the words were to indicate the purpose for which it was indorsed and that it was not to be paid to any one. Then he made out her deposit ticket for her, put it with the check in the pass book, and the lesson was ended.

A few days later he came home and found his wife in tears.

"What is it, sweetheart?" he asked anxiously.

"I dare not tell you!" she moaned.

"Anything happen to the children?"

"No."

"Don't keep me in suspense."

"I've lost the hundred dollars you gave me for the bank."

"Why, I didn't understand that you were going to draw it."

"I didn't put it in."

"Oh, well, if you've only lost the check it doesn't matter."

"I haven't lost it." Fresh tears started.

"Well, what became of it?"

"I was cleaning out my desk and burning the old papers in it. I threw a lot of things into a wastebasket and dumped them into the kitchen range. The check and the little book it was in are all burned up."

She sobbed as though her heart would break.

Her husband looked at her pityingly, a smile of hopelessness on his lips. She thought the check was destructible, like a bank bill.

He kissed away her tears, explained how he would give her another check in place of the one she had burned and gave her another lesson on the subject. She was sure she understood him perfectly. The lessons were continued for many months, and Mr. Read became convinced that his wife had learned all about banking. At any rate, she made deposits and drew checks as well as anybody.

Then one day when Mr. Read went into the bank he was called in to the office of the cashier, who gave an "ahem" and said:

"Your wife, who has an account with us, needs some explanation of banking methods."

"What's she been doing?"

"Nothing of any importance; nothing wrong. It is simply a matter of ignorance of banking. We notified her a few days ago that her account was overdrawn, and she sent us her check on our own bank to cover the deficiency."

"Humph!" grunted Mr. Read. "How much is it?"

"Two hundred and forty dollars."

Mr. Read drew a check for the amount and when he went home in the evening kissed his wife as usual and began reading the evening paper.

"Anything new in town today, dear?" asked Mrs. Read.

"Yes; it is reported that a new banking law has passed congress."

"Indeed! What are its main features?"

"It will make paying an overdraft with a check of the person overdrawing, drawn on the bank where the overdraft has occurred, illegal. You can't do that any more."

"Isn't it fortunate that I paid up before the law was passed?"

"Very. If you're tired of the trouble of keeping your account suppose you put yours in with mine."

"I think I will. You know I only did it to learn how, and, now that I have learned, I don't need to bother with it any more."

"Just so. Let's go down to dinner."

"Bob," she said a few days later, "I've been thinking that if you should die before me how nice it will be now that I've learned business and will be able to take care of my own affairs."

"You won't need another husband, will you?"

She looked at him reproachfully.

"You say you called this morning on my husband at his office? He's always so busy. Did you have any trouble in seeing him?"

"Yes, at first. He was sitting behind his desk, and I couldn't see him until he moved his feet."—Cleveland Plain Dealer.

CHRONIC COLDS

Are Contracted by Changeable Weather. A Simple Remedy.

Sudden changes are particularly trying for old people or those who suffer from a weakened, run-down condition, chronic coughs, colds or bronchitis, but if such persons would only apply common sense methods in the treatment of their condition, much discomfort and suffering might be avoided.

The most essential thing to do is to build up strength, enrich the blood, increase vital resistance and to accomplish this nothing equals Vinol, our cod liver and iron tonic.

Mrs. M. J. Grimes, of Springfield, Ohio, says: "I was bady run-down, nervous and weak, and while in this condition I contracted a heavy cold and rheumatism. Vinol was recommended and I am happy to say it cured my cold and restored me to health again."

Old people, delicate children, run-down, overworked and tired women, those suffering from bronchitis, chronic coughs and colds should try a bottle of Vinol. We will return your money if it does not help you. People's Drug Store, Gettysburg, Pa.

WHAT GETTYSBURG WANTS TO KNOW

The Answer Is Found in the Statement of a Gettysburg Resident.

From week to week, from year to year, there have been appearing in these columns statements made by neighbors, which we have all read with great interest, and many of us with great profit. But what we want to know is, do they stand the greatest test of all—the test of time? Here is conclusive evidence on this point from a Gettysburg woman:

Mrs. C. Culp, 423 Washington St., Gettysburg, Pa., says: "We still use Doan's Kidney Pills in our family and find them very good. One of the family had an attack of kidney complaint after the measles and was left with very weak kidneys. He also had backache and pains in his sides and whenever he lifted, he was in distress. Doan's Kidney Pills were recommended and he gave them a trial. I never thought a medicine could give relief so quickly. We recommend Doan's Kidney Pills to anyone who is troubled with kidney complaint."

HUERTA ORDERS CONGRESS CLOSED

He Charges Usurpation and Calls an Election.

Mexico City, Mex., Oct. 13.—President Huerta has dissolved both branches of the Mexican national congress and he has issued a proclamation calling for new elections of senators and deputies on Oct. 26.

This is the day that has been set for the presidential election. He also released the imprisoned members of the chamber of deputies.

The procalamation dissolving the present congress came, following the coup d'etat by which President Huerta's federal soldiery, under the lead of Minister Garza Aldape and Chief of Police Chayiz invaded the National Palace when congress was in session and seized 110 non-Catholic deputies and locked them up in the penitentiary.

Three of these imprisoned deputies, it is said, have been executed, notwithstanding the definite pledge given by the government at the time of the seizure that none of the deputies would be harmed in custody.

It is feared that there may be more summary executions, and the fears of the families and friends of the imprisoned members of congress are heightened by the realization of the difficulty of ever finding out exactly what has happened.

President Huerta, in dissolving congress, alleges that the senators and deputies have committed collectively various illegal acts, including the attempted invasion of the constitutional prerogatives of the president.

The Parasol Ants.

In Florida and Texas there is an ant known as the parasol ant. Ants of this kind are so called because they cut off tiny bits of leaves and carry them over their heads and bodies after the manner of parasols. With these portions of leaf the ant lines its nest.

This member of the ant family is very large, and consequently it must build much larger houses than the garden variety with which we are all familiar.

SCIENCE VERIFIES NEW TESTAMENT

Sir William Mitchell Ramsay Visits Philadelphia.

TO LECTURE AT U. OF P.

Noted Archaeologist Says Men to Whom Books Are Ascribed Really Wrote Them.

Philadelphia, Oct. 13. — Orthodox Christianity, the belief that the Saviour lived and died to save the world and that his sacrifice was the supreme factor in its redemption, was argued by Sir William Mitchell Ramsay, the world famed archaeologist, in a sermon to a congregation that thronged the Bryn Mawr Presbyterian church.

Sir William is considered the authority on the life and work of the Apostle Paul. For thirty years he labored in Asia Minor, and he declared in an interview that his researches had established the historical correctness of the New Testament; that the men to whom the books of the New Testament are ascribed really wrote them. Sir William is to deliver a series of lectures at the University of Pennsylvania during this and next week on discoveries relating particularly to the Great Apostle of Christianity.

His sermon, regarded as it would necessarily be by his hearers as the statements of a man far advanced in learning, had peculiar force, especially as it was directed to an absolute regard of Christianity as a religion to be accepted at the face value given it by the writings of the New Testament.

An incidental reference in his sermon was elaborated during the interview. He said that Mohammedanism was spreading in eastern Asia. In the interview he remarked that it is the dream of these eastern Mohammedans to convert Japan to the religion of Islam, so that a new race of warlike people can take the place of the decadent western Turks and Arabs.

"The greatest thing in Christianity is the necessity for accepting the power of faith. It might seem, at times, as though Christianity is almost on too high a plane for human nature to understand; as though it is impossible to live the divine life in the world and among its activities.

"That is what makes the Christian religion pre-eminent. Mohammedanism, from a long observation, results in a quick advancement of a degraded people to a much higher plane than they formerly occupied—but it is a plane that is not high enough. Mohammedanism will advance such people more quickly that Christianity will. It takes longer to lead the savage upward to Christianity than to Mohammedanism.

"But there is this peculiar thing about Mohammedanism. When a race has reached the highest level under that religion there is sure to begin a long, slow deterioration.

"The reason is simple. Mohammedanism presents an ideal that can be attained. The ideal Christianity can not be attained. The moment an ideal is reached its professors stop. But with Christianity there must always be the striving upward."

KILLED BESIDE CHILDREN

Auto Driver Meets Fate at Crossing and Little Ones Live.

Bloomsburg, Pa., Oct. 13. — Isaac Shaffer, driving an auto truck, was instanly killed on the East Bloomsburg grade crossing of the Pennsylvania railroad when an engine at high speed, running "light" between Wilkes-Barre and Sunbury, struck the auto.

With him on the truck were his niece and nephew, Jennie Whitenight, aged seven years, and Theodore, aged two years, children of Harry Whitenight; his brother, Richard Shaffer, and Bruce Neyhard, all of Bloomsburg.

The dead man's brother and Neyhard escaped with slight injuries by jumping, but the children were on the seat when the engine hit the truck. Each was carried fifty feet by the engine, while the driver, terribly mangled, was held in the pilot's death grip until tossed aside fifty yards below the crossing.

The little girl's jaw was fractured and her face shockingly lacerated, while it is feared at the Bloomsburg hospital, where both children were taken, that she cannot recover from the shock.

CONNIE MACK.

Leader of the Athletics and His Score Card.

© 1913, by American Press Association.

Whether facing victory or defeat, there is no change in the expression of the astute Connie Mack. During all games he sits on the bench studying the scientific points of the game just as a philosopher. See him here in the big series. He has his score card and pencil. These instruments he uses to signal his men.

FIND LAND IN ARCTIC

Russian Explorer Reports Locating Big Body of Ground.

St. Michael, Alaska, Oct. 13. — The Russian government steamers Taimyr and Waygatch, under Commander Wilitsky, which have been engaged in Arctic exploration north of Siberia for three years, arrived here for coal.

Captain Wilitsky reported the discovery of a body of land as large as Greenland, extending beyond latitude 81 north and longitude 102 east.

Admiral Peary and other Arctic explorers have believed that a large body of land, almost a continent, existed in the polar regions. The Canadian government had so much faith in the theories of Peary, Stefanson and other explorers that last summer it sent out Vilhjalmur Stefanson with the best equipped polar expedition that ever entered the ice.

THERE are other sweepers that have permanent brush attachment but there is no sweeper we know of beside the Model "S" that has a REAL Carpet Sweeper running in combination with the vacuum cleaner. This is a feature that every housewife has been looking for. She has insisted that she have something to pick up every particle of lint, hairs, threads, matches, etc.- and the ordinary vacuum cleaner has not accomplished this.
